1 SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

2 Congress finds the following:

3 (1) Recent studies indicate that thousands of 4 children and youth are at risk for human trafficking
5 in the United States.

6 (2) A significant percentage of children and 7 youth who are trafficked in the United States will 8 commit prostitution offenses or other nonviolent of-9 fenses in connection with their exploitation by a traf-
10 ficker.

11 (3) The prostitution statutes in many jurisdic-
12 tions do not differentiate between adult prostitutes
13 and children or youths who have been commercially
14 sexually exploited.

1 (4) Evidence suggests that runaway or home-
2 less children and youth and young adults leaving the 3 foster care system are especially vulnerable to com-
4 mercial sexual exploitation.

5 (5) The majority of children and youths who 6 are involved in the criminal or justice systems are 7 responsive to interventions that integrate treatment,
8 rehabilitation, and support services.

9 (6) Collaborative programs between services
10 providers and criminal or juvenile justice systems 11 that ensure the provision of counseling, housing and 12 related services for trafficking victims can reduce the 13 number of such individuals in corrections facilities.

14 SEC. 4. PURPOSE.

15 (a) IN GENERAL.—The purpose of this Act is to com-
16 bat domestic human trafficking by facilitating collabora-
17 tion among the criminal justice system, juvenile justice
18 system, and support services.

19 (b) COLLABORATION.—The collaboration described in 20 subsection (a) is needed—

21 (1) to protect public safety by intervening with 22 juvenile offenders who have been trafficked;

23 (2) to provide courts, including new trafficking
24 victims' courts, with appropriate treatment options;

1 (3) to maximize the use of alternatives to pros-
2 ecution in appropriate cases involving youths who 3 have committed nonviolent offenses, such as pros-
4 titution, in connection with their exploitation by a 5 trafficker;

6 (4) to promote adequate training for criminal
7 justice system personnel about the unique challenges 8 facing juveniles who have been trafficked and the 9 appropriate response to such children and youths in 10 the criminal justice system;

11 (5) to promote communication among adult or 12 juvenile justice personnel, medical personnel, mental 13 health treatment personnel, and support services
14 such as housing, job placement, community, faith
15 based, and crime victims organizations; and

16 (6) to promote communication and collaboration
17 among governmental officials with respect to all 18 forms of human trafficking in the United States.
